RESEARCH INTERESTS	computer networks, future internet architecture, sensor networks, network security
RESEARCH EXPERIENCE	eXpressive Internet Architecture (XIA), Carnegie Mellon University Fall 2011 – present My current research is on XIA, one of five future Internet architecture projects funded by the NSF. XIA is a clean-slate redesign of the Internet aiming to (1) make the Internet evolvable — good ideas in the future shouldn’t require a “flag day” upgrade, (2) support an extensible set of communication paradigms (like content- or service-centric communication) that align with what applications actually want to do, and (3) provide “intrinsic” security at the network layer. Computational Epidemiology Group, University of Iowa Spring 2009 – Summer 2011 I studied the spread of disease and outbreak prevention; in particular, I did this in a hospital setting by using wireless sensor networks to examine social networks among healthcare workers and to monitor hand hygiene compliance. I used this data to drive outbreak simulations.
RELEVANT WORK EXPERIENCE	Virtual Reality Applications Center, Iowa State University Summer 2008, Summer 2009, Winter 2009 I worked on a team at ISU’s world-famous virtual reality center developing Meta!Blast, an interactive 3D computer game designed to enhance cell biology education in high schools. One of my projects was developing the game’s character animation library.

TEACHING      Fall 2012    Graduate Computer Networks (15-744)    Peter Steenkiste

GRADUATE COURSEWORK

Carnegie Mellon University
Spring 2013	Machine Learning	Barnabás Póczos and Alex Smola
Fall 2012	Computer Architecture	Todd Mowry
Fall 2012	Network Security	Adrian Perrig
Spring 2012	Advanced Storage Systems	Greg Ganger and Garth Gibson
Spring 2012	Graduate Algorithms	Manuel Blum
Fall 2011	Computer Networks	Peter Steenkiste
Fall 2011	Types and Programming Languages	Bob Harper
The University of Iowa
Spring 2011	Distributed Systems and Algorithms	Sukumar Ghosh
Spring 2010	Artificial Intelligence	Alberto Segre
Fall 2009	Knowledge Discovery (Machine Learning)	Nick Street

SERVICE

Doctoral Review Committee, Carnegie Mellon University
Member      Spring 2013 – present

CS Admitted Student Open House, Carnegie Mellon University
Student Co-Coordinator      Spring 2013

Dec/5, Carnegie Mellon University
President

Fall 2012 – Spring 2013

Co-direct the School of Computer Science's graduate student social organization. My primary responsibility is organizing the Dec/5 "TGs" — SCS-wide happy hours sponsored by industry recruiters and held roughly twice a month.

Lecture Committee, University of Iowa
Member

Fall 2010 – Spring 2011

Planned and produced the only student-run lecture series in the US. Duties included contacting agents, preparing publicity materials, hosting speakers on campus, and coordinating lectures' technical needs. Our Lecture Series included Aasif Mandvi from The Daily Show and Wikipedia founder Jimmy Wales.

Ames Community Theater, Ames, IA
Lighting Designer

2004 – 2011

Responsible for designing the lighting for mainstage productions, training new lighting technicians, maintaining lighting equipment, and ordering supplies.

OTHER INTERESTS

photography, theatrical lighting design
